

Cowboy Serenade

Cordero Del Rio, a popular Latino country singer, meets and falls in love with Asher English, an outspoken Anglo businessman. The struggle to conduct their private relationship in the public arena turns sour and causes both of them religious and political difficulties. The backdrop to their desire to be left alone in their privacy is the indifferent-though manipulative-stance by church and state regarding homosexuality. Confrontation with church and state threatens their relationship to the point of destruction. But in the end, their human need and strong stamina, individually and collectively, empowers them to transcend the obstacles conspiring to destroy and separate them. By the author of Buddy, also available at Publish America.
