

The Sounding of Horns

In January, 1920, four years after the mysterious death of her father (the mayor of LAquila in the Abruzzi region), eighteen-year old Harpina (Pina), determined and headstrong, embarks for America and an arranged marriage to Lessio, a toughened Sicilian-American veteran of military service in France. The stormy Atlantic voyage is terrifying for her, leading to a deep spiritual conversion. With the help of family and friends in the ethnic Italian neighborhood of South Philadelphia, their relationship begins to develop, but many forces create eddies of interference. Pina attracts the attention of a sophisticated woman who falls in love with her and, in recognizing the quality of the newcomers voice, arranges connections leading to both the world of Broadway and the operatic stage. With Pinas career swiftly taking shape, tensions develop with Lessio who, from what Pina has told him and his own intimations, becomes aware of a shadowy presence stalking her; enlisting help for her sake, he forms alliances aimed at unraveling the mystery surrounding her. The canvas broadens at a whirlwind pace, embracing a post-World War I period which saw the granting of the vote to American women; the beginning of prohibition; and the onset of official international inquiries into covert armaments trafficking, including the complex industrial and political webs which had fatally entangled her father.
