

The Marriage MBA - The 7 Things You Need to Know about Dating and Relationships

John is a life-long learner with varied interests and background. He progressed from apprentice electrician, journeyman to project foreman and into teaching - just as his first marriage ended. Between marriages John earned an education degree and a Master of Science degree in Counseling Psychology. He studied both career and mate selection and put his academic skills to work in finding his ideal mate. His focus in dating for 6 years was on identifying women with long-lasting and stable traits known to result in successful relationships which eventually led him to marrying a Social Worker. Together they moved to rural SW Alberta where John built their home in the foothills. His wife invested her time in her new career and progressed to Senior Management with the Alberta Government.

In his fiftys John shifted into Finance, becoming a Certified General Accountant (CPA), Chartered Financial Planner and Canadian Investment Manager - specializing in investment management. His varied careers have convinced him that every choice in sex partner, business partner and even your room-mate can impact the remainder of your life - even to the point of financial ruin and depression. Long-term relationships are a huge investment in both yourself and your life partner so it makes a lot of sense to be choosy. Working together with similar values and goals is what keeps us together, says John. John and his second wife have just celebrated their 36th Anniversary in their two-career marriage with three grown children.
