

Taxman Is Watching

Wake up and smell the fear, says Paul DioGuardi, senior partner at DioGuardi & Company, Canadas foremost tax amnesty firm. Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) may be out to get you. Since 2004, when Revenue Canada became an independent agency, more and more Canadians have been under tax surveillance. As the pressure to collect more tax dollars grows, any Canadian taxpayer can be at risk for a secret lifestyle audit or become caught in one of numerous tax infractions. The trick is to know how CRA works and, at the same time, learn the simple and effective strategies both offensive and defensive to avoid tax traps and protect your home and other important assets. This is the guide that every tax-paying Canadian, including the self-employed, small business owners and investors, should read. The Taxman Is Watching delivers accurate, accessible and often little-known information, as well as real-life Tales from Tax Hell. It also: debunks the common myths about the Canada Revenue Agency shows you the red flags that may cause your return to be audited or re-assessed helps you protect your assets and fight back offers practical advice on when to get a tax lawyer tells you what to do when your accountant isnt your friend
